INCLUDING HANDY GUIDE TO PROVIDENCE, AND MAP OF THE CENTRAL DISTRICT

A Few Figures About Providence

Area, 18.29 square miles.
772 new buildings were erected in 1906.
Population Metropolitan District, greater Providence, 391,000.
Population, city proper (based on School Census, January, 1907), 225,000.
There are 113 churches and missions, 20 hotels and 7 theatres; there are 10 national banks, 2 state banks, 3 savings banks and 6 trust companies.
There are 101 public day schools graded as follows: 1 high, 16 grammar, 74 primary, 7 schools for individual work and 3 for backward children; also 14 evening schools, employing in all 971 teachers; number of children of school age, 39,771; and the cost of maintenance is nearly $1,000,000 per year.
The "Metropolitan District of Providence Plantations" is platted, built, lighted, curbed and presents the appearance of a single municipality extending from Lonsdale on the north to Lakewood on the south, about 13 miles in length and five miles in width. This urban area, however, contains three cities and portions of seven towns or townships.
Principal public buildings are new State House, cost about $3,200,000; new Post office, cost about $1,325,000; City Hall cost about $1,000,000; Union Station, cost with approaches, river walls and viaduct about $1,400,000; new State Armory, cost about $500,000; Providence Public Library, cost about $500,000; State Normal School, cost about $500,000.
Providence is the first city in the country in the manufacture of worsteds jewelry and silverware, the former employing 9,521 operatives, with a yearly production of $21,818,534, the latter two combined producing $19,640,314 worth of manufactured goods and employing 8,311 people.

COLONIAL ARCHITECTURE. The student or lover of Colonial architecture will find Providence a rich field, probably equaled only by Salem, Mass. Many magnificent old mansions still survive in their old time grandeur, and most humble but interesting landmarks are scattered all over the lower East Side, and less frequently in many other neighborhoods. Several old churches and public buildings are notable. Among the most interesting are the First Baptist Meeting House, St. John's Episcopal Church, the old State House, University Hall, Old Market House and Round Top Church, already described, and the following:

Dorr House, Benefit Street, adapted from the Poe Villa at Twickenham, built 1809; Clarendon Hotel, 118 North Main Street, 1775; Beckwith House, corner College and Benefit Street, about 1820; Crawford Alien House, corner Benevolent and Magee, about 1810; John Brown House, 52 Power Street, present residence of Marsden J. Perry, Esq., built 1786; John Carter Brown House, 357 Benefit Street, 1791; Carrington House, 66 Williams Street, 1813; (see also rear buildings and court yard connected, 71 Power Street); Thomas Poynton Jones House, northeast corner Power and Brown Streets, 1811; Edward Dexter House (residence of Dr. Day), 1796; Diman House, 296 Angell Street, 1800, Pendleton House, Colonial Museum connected with the R. I. School of Design is a notable reproduction of best early American architecture.

PROLOGUE

On Saturday Evening, July 27, the Old Home Week will be ushered in by Beacon Fires from the historic hills of Rhode Island and Massachusetts, whence flamed in olden times the signal lights that gave speedy warning of the enemy's approach, but now in these days of peace revived to give glad welcome to friends old and new.

Beginning with Block Island a series of signal fires will be started shortly after dark and lighted successively upon the highest hills throughout the State to Beacon Poll Hill in Cumberland. From here, by arrangement with the Attleboro and Boston Old Home Week Committees the signal will be carried through Boston and on beyond the New Hampshire line.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT PROVIDENCE.

Like Rome a "City of Seven Hills."
The Head of navigation on Narragansett Bay.
Rich in historic associations and proud of its honorable history.
Gratified by a present prosperity that is rivalled by but few cities in the world.
Possessed of splendid institutions and unsurpassed educational advantages.
Confident of its future, and with many splendid advantages yet to be developed.

Fortunate in its surroundings, its superbly beautified shores of Narragansett Bay.

A city government free from scandal, and municipal methods that are widely copied.

The natural distributing point for New England for all products from Southern ports.

A city of individual homes, of detached dwellings and a chance to expand in every direction.

Providence is the center of the principal cotton manufacturing district in the United States.

It has the largest department market, and the largest drug store in America and other department stores that have few equals.

Already provided with beautiful parks and popular playgrounds, with a splendid metropolitan park system now being laid out.

Noted for its clean streets and intelligent citizenship, the skilled character of its artisans and the exceptionally high grade of its manufactured products.

The capital city of Rhode Island, the most rapidly growing State and metropolis of Southern New England probably the wealthiest district in the United States.

Other libraries of Providence include the Providence Public Library, the Athenaeum, the Rhode Island Historical Society Library, the State Library and State Law Library.

Providence contains an extraordinary number of clubs of varied purposes. Besides purely business and social clubs, there is the University Club, the Country Club, the Argonaut and Wannametsett, Splendid bay shore clubs like Spiritum and Pompano, boating clubs, many yacht clubs, six or seven canoe clubs, automobile polo and croquet clubs, of five or six members, etc.

Providence contains three valuable museums and art galleries. The School of Design has a fine gallery of modern art, another of Japanese art, and the splendid Pendleton House with its unrivaled collection of Colonial furnishings. The R. I. Historical Society has a valuable museum. A Natural History Museum is at Roger Williams Park. The Ann Mary Brown Memorial Museum is full of rare prints and paintings by old masters. Providence Art Club has many exhibitions of paintings.

Brown University, originally called R. I. College, established 1764, moved from Warren to Providence in 1770. The oldest building is University Hall begun in 1770 and famous as headquarters of our French allies during the Revolutionary war, and as the building where George Washington received his "L. L. D." Several splendid libraries connected with the University include John Carter Brown Library, a collection of world wide fame and College Library, corner Waterman and Prospect streets, Natural History Museum in Rhode Island Hall, Paintings, Statuary, etc. in South and Manning Halls.

Of its great trust companies, one is said to be the largest banking institution in New England and one is the oldest trust company in America. One of them has the finest business building in New England and the most beautiful banking room in the world. Applications for relief at the "Municipal Hotel" are required to pay for a portion of the aid rendered by work in the Charity Wood Yard, 616 Eddy street.

See Senate House of Representatives, State Reception room and State Library. Largest marble dome in the world. Considered a triumph of masonry; rises 235 feet above terrace level. McKim, Mead and White architects.

The State House grounds contain 17 acres. In Secretary of State's Office is original charter granted by King Charles to Roger Williams in 1663 by which state was governed until 1843.

OLD STATE HOUSE. Built 1763. Benefit North Main and Court streets. Originally occupied by R. I. Colonial Assembly, who on May 4, 1776, two months prior to the Declaration of Independence in Philadelphia, adopted the famous act renouncing allegiance to Great Britain. This was the first official Declaration of Independence made by any colony. The 131 anniversary of the event was celebrated in the same hall May 4, 1907. Building now used by District Court.

NEW POST OFFICE (new building), is to cost $1,325,000. East end of Exchange Place. Clark and Howe architects. Regarded by architects as one of the finest government buildings outside of Washington.

CITY HALL (erected 1871-8) cost $1,000,000. West end of Exchange Place. Fine lobby and Council Chambers. Original deeds of Providence location given to Roger Williams by the Indian chieftains in 1639, are in Recorder of Deeds office.

UNION STATION. North of Exchange Place and City Park a long row series of buildings of plain, dignified architecture, regarded as one of the best "operating stations" in the country; used by about 20,000 people daily. Regarded by railroad engineers as the best combination of double terminal and "through" station in existence. The Post office and a river run under station. Station cost with approaches $1,100,000.

EXCHANGE PL. THE CIVIC CENTER. A long rectangular plaza, that formerly like most of the present business district, was covered by tide water. City Hall Park separated from the Union Station. The Post office and the City Hall are at its east and west ends respectively. Important business buildings are along south side. Soldiers and Sailors Monument in its centre. The city has devoted land valued at nearly $3,000,000 to the park and open space in center and thus created the first realization of modern civic centre ideas in America.

CITY HALL PARK contains Banjotti Memorial Fountain and equestrian estate of General Burnside. Plans are now being drawn (1907) for creation of Public Garden on land north of Union Station extending to State House and State Normal School.
